

Introduction

Welcome

Welcome to 'Global and National Health'. This is a 4.5 unit course within Stage 1 of the Bachelor of Nursing Program.

This course offers important insights for students embarking upon a career as a health professional as it focuses on theory and principles that underpin public and population health. As a health professional, you are placed in a privileged position where you have the opportunity to work with diverse people and groups within society. As health is understood and experienced differently by individuals, groups, communities and populations, the Global and National Health course aims to foster an understanding of health and health care systems from a local, national and global perspective.

Specifically, the course will challenge students to consider concepts of health from a variety of perspectives and from a range of contexts. In the first instance, students are encouraged to explore their own values, beliefs and culture as this underpins how health is viewed. Students will consider how health is determined, gain an understanding of approaches to the provision and delivery of health care both within Australia and internationally, discuss how health is measured, and how health priorities are identified. Students will explore the role of the health professional in the planning and delivery of health care for individuals, communities and populations.

This course is designed to engage students as an active participant in their learning using an inquiry based learning approach focusing on questioning, critical thinking, problem-solving and reflection.

The Course Outline provides all information about the course including: objectives, assessment requirements, relevant legislative requirements, University policy and the Course Calendar. It is important that students familiarise themselves with and understand this document.

We hope that you find HLTH 1036, Global and National Health both challenging and interesting.

Academic Integrity

Academic integrity is the foundation of university life and is fundamental to the reputation of UniSA and its staff and students. Academic integrity means a commitment by all staff and students to act with honesty, trustworthiness, fairness, respect and responsibility in all academic work.

An important part of practising integrity in academic work is showing respect for other people's ideas, and being honest about how they have contributed to your work. This means taking care not to represent the work of others as your own. Using another person's work without proper acknowledgement is considered Academic Misconduct, and the University takes this very seriously.

The University of South Australia expects students to demonstrate the highest standards of academic integrity so that its degrees are earned honestly and are trusted and valued by its students and their employers. To ensure this happens, the University has policies and procedures in place to promote academic integrity and manage academic misconduct. For example, work submitted electronically by students for assessment will be examined for copied and un-referenced text using the text comparison software Turnitin <http://www.turnitin.com>.

More information about academic integrity and what constitutes academic misconduct can be found in Section 9 of the Assessment Policies and Procedures Manual (APPM): <http://i.unisa.edu.au/policies-and-procedures/codes/assessment-policies/>. The Academic Integrity Module explains in more detail how students can work with integrity at the University: <https://lo.unisa.edu.au/mod/book/view.php?id=252142>
